Numismagram Newsletter #14 (XII/2018)

As we get unpacked from our most recent show in San Francisco, here is a brief update on how it went for us, along with some of the happenings over the past few weeks, and finally, the overall contents of this month's upload of new material.

Having a show in one's own neck of the woods is always convenient, and we had a great time visiting with colleagues and meeting a few new customers. Given all of our recent buying, we had three cases at this show—a new high for us—and it was awesome to see everything displayed. Can you spot anything which still isn't appearing on our site? If so, they will be coming to you soon enough...

During Thanksgiving, we hosted some family and had a modest meal, opting for roasted Cornish game hens rather than the traditional turkey during turkey day in America. The result was a success, and these birds were delicious...

Given their smaller size, it made carving them up much easier. We all know how involved the carving of the turkey can be, and the dinner table cutting can become rather laborious. I believe that one of the new medals in this month's upload illustrates that concept perfectly...

Shortly after the Thanksgiving holiday, we celebrated my wife's birthday, and she got a chance to take a ride in her father's MGA on a crisp fall day. Coincidentally, another medal in this month's upload also illustrates this event fairly well...

Lastly, there is the upload. In addition to those listed above, there are some highly attractive WWI-related pieces, a handful of shooting medals, a couple US colonial medals listed in Betts and relating to the French & Indian War, some attractive art pieces, and an alluring and rare Franco-Egyptian medal of Fuad I with a nautical theme.

Stay tuned for a special holiday-themed mid-month upload later this month, as we explore the avian aspects to "The Twelve Days of Christmas," along, of course, with an array of choice medals.
